Operations Management Intern at McLagan in Stamford
During my time at the company, the operations interns were responsible for ensuring the accuracy of the compensation data that we received from clients, running queries on that data to solve issues that were brought to our attention, and coordinating with senior staff in order to get reports out to our clients in time. These were our main responsibilities throughout the summer, but there were numerous other things that we had to handle. We were taught how to use the company's database management system which allowed us to do almost anything they asked of us. Somethings took a matter of seconds and some problems took a few days and required our entire team of interns. The work we did varied greatly at times.
How has the BCLC helped you prepare for your internship?

The BCLC did so much in preparing me for my internship last summer. The biggest thing they taught me was how to act professionally. Being in an office is fun and you make great relationships while you are there. However, you always need to keep in mind that you are in a professional setting and remember to act accordingly. Many of the other interns did not understand this and it showed in the way they acted toward employees who had been at the company for years and had the ability to let them go at any moment. Through FYE, networking events, and many other things, the BCLC taught me how to be respectful in an office environment and this really made my transition a lot easier going into the summer. I could focus on learning and building relationships with my coworkers rather than whether what I was saying and doing was appropriate.
